

1. What were motivations for people to settle in Missouri? Why did they stay in Missouri instead of going west?

Some Motivations for people are, In the 1830's there was a growth and prosperity with the burgeoning river city. Lots of new buildings, schools, churches that were built at this time, a public school system began and the city implemented a new water system.

2. How did the Missouri settlers help the travelers prepare for their journey west?

Missouri settlers help the travelers prepare for their journey west. The Gateway to the West. The center of fur trade in the U.S. during the early 1800's. The two large rivers near the city supplied them with the means to send their furs and other goods back east to be sold.

3. How did westward expansion affect the Missouri settlers?

Westward expansion affected the Missouri settlers. When heading west, St. Louis was the last big city that many settlers encountered. The two large rivers near the city supplied them with the means to send their furs and

1. How did the Native Americans relate to the settlers in Missouri?

For hundreds of years, the white settlers had been trying to move the Native Americans westward. The Indians removal act of 1830 gave President Andrew Jackson the authority to arrange for the eastern tribes to pack up and move west of the Mississippi.

2. How did the Native Americans relate to westward travelers?

The Indians removal act of 1830 gave President Andrew Jackson the authority to arrange for the eastern tribes to pack up and move west of the Mississippi.

3. How did westward expansion affect the Native Americans?

they had to move because of the California gold rush. and made them miserable.

4. What hardships and difficulties did the Native Americans face?

they had to face starvation, they got sick and go through rivers with boats and walk through water bare foot and got sick out of their land.

5. What was life like in for the Native Americans during the time of westward expansion?

Most of them died from getting sick and looking for food and had to ride boats and some walk through water.

1. What were motivations for people to start traveling west? Why did they want to go west?

They wanted to go west because the entire population in there old town started moving.

2. What did the travelers do to prepare for their journey west?

They carried 100 kilometers of all the food in many wagons.

3. What part did Missouri play for the westward travelers?

If you farm your own land you get the land for free.

4. What paths did the travelers take to go west? What hardships and difficulties did the travelers face?

They had to cross the Columbia river and a lot of people died. They took the Oregon trail. And had to walk a lot. They had mistakes and bad deserts, and bad weather.

5. Where did the travelers settle? What was life like for them once they settled in their new home?

They settled in Oregon and California. Their new life was hard because they got there in late spring and had to build farms and houses, before winter.